procedure
We will prepare your beer and all you have to do is pitch the yeast. And bottle
when ready

Where Should I Store My Beer? and How Long Will It Last?

Cool and dark, is the best way to store your beer. Refrigerated beers will last longer than those stored in your garage. Nevertheless, your beer can remain sediment-free for up to three months. Beer will keep longer in glass bottles or cans, but plastic bottles, regardless of colour, will allow beer to oxidize and re-ferment faster forming sediment(yeast). Pouring beer into a glass, leaving behind the sediment is a simple solution for old beer, but there might be a slight yeast taste. Only brown glass bottles filter out the harmful ultra violet light which causes beer to go “skunky”, keeping all beer in the dark (in boxes) is a good plan.

Beer Storage Procedure

Store beer in a cool dark place. Properly stored beer will have a shelf-life of 2-3 months.

See chart following;

Location	Summer	Winter
refrigerator	2-3 mon.	2-3 mon.
cold cellar	4-6 weeks	2 mon.
basement floor	3-4 weeks	4-6 weeks
closet	2-3 weeks	2-3 weeks .

How Do I Take Care Of My Bottles?

After each beer you should take a few moments to rinse your bottle. If you choose to wash out your bottles, make sure that you rinse the soap out thoroughly! You can run your bottles through the dishwasher, but make sure that you select the “air dry” or “cool dry” setting. You don’t want the heating element at the bottom of your dishwasher melting your plastic bottles! Once clean, store your bottles in their boxes upside down so as to avoid collecting dust and beasties. If you find that your bottles have somehow developed some kind of growth in them, soak them in a solution of “saniton” ( which you can buy from us) for about half an hour, then rinse thoroughly.

Glass bottles are the easiest to clean and beer will store longer, especially if you use coloured ones.
